Press Statement No. 63

20 March 1973

AUSTRALIAN FILM AND TELEVISION SCHOOL

The Australian Film and Television School will be established as a Statutory Authority. Cabinet decided today that the School would have the status of a College of Advanced Education and would provide a formal curriculum and other activities aimed at developing creative, highly trained people for film and television education and the industry generally.

A Bill establishing the School as a statutory body is expected to be ready later this month. It will be introduced to Parliament as soon as possible.
