

PRIME MINISTER

FOR MEDIA

30 March 1986

I am saddened by the death of Alan Missen. He was a man of great personal charm and character. He had an awareness of the problems of people, a remarkable breadth of vision, a tolerance and a compassion. He was outstanding in his work in the fields of Amnesty, and civil liberties generally. Above all, Alan Missen was a man of conscience and a great humanist. The Parliament is the poorer for his untimely death. I extend my sympathies to his family.
